BACKS OFFICERS' DEFENSE POLICY

Rebellious Resolutions Are Voted Down Almost Unanimously

BLACKLIST MADE UP BY A NON-MEMBER

Coolidge Letter Commending Ford Hall Forum Enters

Discussion SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON-The D. A. R. administration's national defense policy won overwhelmingly in the contest over the "blacklist" issue which was the heart of the resolutions introduced by Mrs. Eleanor P. S. Roy of Kansas, but the 14, who faced the of the officers and their following by voting for them, were the dramatic figures. All of the three "rebellious" resolutions, including one aimed against the "blacklist," were almost unanimously defeated.

They were not a concentrated roup, but rose here and there throughout the huge auditorium from Kansas, New York, Mississippi and other scattered states. The mo-ment arrived that had been looked forward to ever since the congress convened, when Mrs. Henry B. Joy, chairman of the Resolutions Com-mittee and a Vice-President-Generalelect, read the resolution which had been submitted to the committee, without recommendation.

Mrs. Roy was recognized, and, coming to the platform, explained that at the time these resolutions were prepared it had seemed it would be a matter or course that they would be approved, but that she had found they were not so regarded by those in authority. She therefore moved that they be laid on the table. This was a surprise movement, but the official parliamentarian said this would enable the resolutions to be brought up later, and administration supporters insisted that every loyal Daughter be permitted to vote down the resolutions.

Meanwhile there was a demand that Mrs. Roy announce to what or-ganizations she belonged in addition to the D. A. R. Very calmly she began: "Alumnae of the State Univer-Women's International League for Peace and Freedom." This was what had been waited for and hisses broke forth, quickly quelled by Mrs. A. J. ### D. A. R. CONGRESS New Light Shed on Roosevelt's Attitude on Prohibition Question

Told Interviewer in 1914 He Was Opposed to License System—Thought Campaign of Education Should Precede Making Prohibition Political Issue

The following hitherto-unpub- ence between us upon a variety of lished interview with Theodore Roosevelt was given in 1914, six years before the Eighteenth Amendment became operative, when the former President was still head of the Progressive Party movement. Mr. Ferguson, whom Colonel Roosevelt summoned to discuss prohibition with him, is a widely known writer and speaker on the subject writer and speaker on the subject. In submitting this interesting manuscript to THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, Mr. Ferguson writes:

"I have kept this matter unpub-lished all these years because there has never been a time since the Colonel's passing when it seemed to me anything could be served by its publication. I am offering it to you now, both because I think it will have a tendency to good results and because it is, in a certain sense, a trust committed to me by the Colonel, and I feel responsible for putting it before the world.".

By WILLIAM P. F. FERGUSON In March of 1914, Theodore Roosevelt telegraphed me, asking me to come to New York to talk over certain matters. I was at that time editing a ha-tional paper of the Prohibition Party at Franklin, Pa.; and Colonel Roosevelt knew me as a critic of some o the policies of his administration in regard to the liquor traffic and as a student of military matters in which he also was intere ted. Mr. Wood has installed this device in the observatory on top of his new winter home here. Mr. Wood says he has visited many observatories and has been impressed with their lack of facilities for comfort. Generally, to view a star one has to climb on a stepladder and adjust the telescope. For instance the astronomer working in the Royal Observatory at Greenwich reclines on a mattress which can be tilted on a frame. However, it can only be moved by drag-ing it across the floor and the observer must maintain a fixed angle, which is often incommodious, to say the least. With Mr. Wood's invention a star at the zenith can be watched with no backward stretching of the neck, for a touch of a button tilts the observer's seat to the right position. The roof of the dome with its slot for the telescope, is rotated merely BY BRITISH TRAINS by pressing a button, and clockwork synchronizes its movement with that of the telescope. Mr. Wood's six-inch Zeiss telescope is mounted on a huge concrete pedestal, which extends down through the house to solid rock, so that there may be no vihration of the instrument.

The reporter and camera man were invited to lunch in the lighthouse with the fliers. The luncheon was something of an international affair, there being at the table two Germans, a Swede, an Englishman and three French Canadians.

Neither of the fliers spoke much of their ocean flight beyond saying that the latter part was extremely rough. Captain Koehl had high praise for the paraffin coating given the plane to rpevent formation of ice. He said this experiment was a com-

Extends Range of Work in Protecting Forests to Take in More Towns

Massachusetts' experimental work in forest fire prevention, which has attracted the attention of forestry interests all over the East, has been so successful that its range is to be extended under a legislative act which has just become law.

As a result of more than two years' experience in six towns on Cape Cod. in which community educational and patrolling activities were inaugurated, the fire waste has been reduced to one-fifth of its former proportions. Under the new law six more towns, comprising practically the remainder of the wooded area of the Cape, will be included in the patrol work in which the State and towns will

The act, as explained by Harris A. Reynolds, secretary of the Massachusetts Forestry Association one of its sponsors, provides for appoint ment of a patrolman under the direction of the state forester who range through Dennis, Harwich, Brewster, Chatham, Orleans and Wellfleet, aiding local fire wardens in these places.

Each town has appropriated $300 for its own patrol work, and the plan is that the state patrolman advise the local wardens in getting the work well enough established that the towns can maintain it by themselves after the second The state appropriation is a year for spring and fall work. The state patrolman will have the same equipment as those in the pumps, shovels and brooms. The first experimental area extending from Bourne to Barnstable, inclusive, is now in its third year and, according to Mr. Reynolds, it apparently will show a record of 20 per cent less cost for fighting fire and 80 per cent less loss of timber

"The methods have all been directed at 'putting out' fires not merely before they have gained headway but before they start," Mr. Rey-nolds explained. Emphasis has been placed upon carefulness to avoid starting fires. This has been stressed in community meetings. It has appealed to community pride.

Patrolmen have not only watched out for incipient fires, but they have made the effort to talk with as many persons as possible about carefulness in the woods. A recent meeting of more than 225 fire wardens, deputies and volunteers, where five years ago it probably would have been impossible to get 50 people together, indicates the popular interest in the subject on the Cape. So far this spring the area of the experiment has had no fires of any consequence, the largest being confined to eight acres, as compared to the devastation of several hundred acres in fires of some years ago.

BY WINELESS FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-Political observers profess to see upon the horizon a storm cloud presaging a battle between two determined men-Viscount Cecil and Lord Cushendun-to win over the Conservative Party. Clashes have arisen between Lord Cushendun, a resolute party man representing Great Britain at Geneva, and Lord Cecil, a strong idealist, apparently at odds with his ex-colleagues in the Baldwin Ministry over the League of Nations Union's alleged partisan activities on behalf of the compul-sory arbitration and disarmament features of the Kellogg peace pro-

The Daily News and Westminster Gazette publishes a lengthy news article headed, "Muzzling 680,000 Britons" and an editorial captioned 'A Dangerous Quarrel." It sounds a note of warning against the alleged Tory policy which is represented as obstruction, and takes up the cudgels on behalf of the League of Nations Union and asserts its right to lead and enlighten public opinion on the Geneva questions whether or not they are in conformity with present Government views.

Referring to the optional clause in the Court of International Justice which Lord Cecil champions and the not accuse the Government of moral turpitude. It merely wants to know why Great Britain refused to address a course which seems obviously to DLUMP flesh and soft bones take the mold that is put upon them. If the mold is unnatural, the feet are misshapen. Correct fitting, on the other hand, allows the feet to grow strong and shapely in natural lines. Soft shoes like the Five-toe moccasin can be properly fitted by hand. In some cases, and with some shoes, however, it is desirable to look inside. Then the Footoscope is used. This is an adaptation of the X-ray principle. The child stands with his feet in the machine. The fitter, and the child's mother, if she wishes, look through eyepieces at the top and see the contour of the shoe and the position of every bone inside. The fitter knows exactly how the shoe fits

Bills Drafted in California Far in Advance

Gains in Efficiency and Economy Are Expected by Governor Young

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT SACRAMENTO, Calif. - Increased egislative efficiency and a saving to California taxpayers are expected to result from a new plan for the submission of bills in this State.

Instead of waiting until the Legislature is in session, measures are being drafted by the Legislative Council Bureau in this city. At the instigation of Gov. C. C. Young, members of the administration and groups of citizens interested in legis. lative matters are submitting their problems to the bureau in advance of the next biennial meeting of the

Technical Defects Avoided

In the past it has often developed that few bills were carefully drawn prior to the near approach of the legislative session, and then the flood of proposed laws has been so great that the state offices in Sacramento have been incapable of giving necessary attention to each bill.

MODERN DRAMAS PICTURE TIMES, OBSERVERS SAY

North Carolina Conference Finds Encouragement in Little Theater Projects

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR CHAPEL HILL, N. C .- The drama of Boston, Among the subjects will of today portrays the manners of the people of today just as faithfully as the drama of the Victorian Age expressed those of the people of that day, according to a consensus of a number of authorities of the professional and non-professional stage.

This opinion was expressed at the four-day sessions of the University of North Carolina's first eastern regicnal conference on the drama and the state dramatic festival, which inaugurated a movement looking toward the organization of a national association of little theaters and a national play tournament.

Asked their views as to the fuure trends of the stage, and the effect of extreme realism, they delared that the producers are merely giving the public what it wants, and hat when the public demands other kinds of plays it will get them. Most of the speakers doubted that censorship of the stage has been found practicable. They all viewed the little theater groups as encouraging signs in the development of great American drama. "I know many discouraging things are being said about the stage, but I have been studying the theater closely for more than 40 years, and I think it is in better condition to-day than when I first began to study said George Pierce Baker, head of the department of drama at Yale

Iniversity, and former director of the 47 Workshop at Harvard. Others who expressed opinions included J. Brooks Atkinson, dramatic of the New York Times; Katherine Emmet, former actress and a distinguished member of the council of the Actors' Equity Asso-ciation; Roland Holt, vice-president of the Drama League of New York; Barrett Clark, author and dramatic critic of New York; A. would be unobtainable. Altogether they rode 20,000 miles besides 30,000 covered by ship. They began by crossing France and riding through Spain. Thence they went through Portugal, where they found the roads so bad that they had to travel chiefly on second gear, their average speed being 10 miles per hour. Marseilles • was afterward reached, whence they made their way to Genoa and Milan, and across to Czechoslovakia by way of Trieste and Salsburg. Journeys to Prague and Vienna followed, and then through the Balkans by way of Budapest, Belgrade and Sofia to Constantinople.

the berries into a strainer and letthese methods of washing strawberries is as effective as that first described. And as one's enjoyment of this fruit certainly depends upon its being free from grit, one of the first things to consider in its preparation is the best means of getting it thoroughly clean.

A great many people wash berries after they have been hulled. This practice causes the loss of much of the juice, the very thing that makes the fruit so delightful. Carelessness in removing all decayed and green ots also spoils one's enjoyment of the dish. It always seems too bad to spend good money for food and then, because of lack of reasonable care, to rob it of its ability to give pleasure to all.

Buying to Avoid Waste If strawberries must be kept a day or two before they are prepared for the table, they should be kept in a dark, cool place and should be examined daily so that any that are spoiled may be removed. They will

If one seeks an illustration of the perpetual relationship that exists between God and man, one may readily see that the true relation of someone to discover and set forth in comprehensible manner the truths contained in the numeration table, these numerical facts had no beginning; they always existed, ready to be applied at all times and in all places and conditions, when clearly perceived. This changeless relationship of numbers illustrates, in a limited way, the immense truth which Mrs. Eddy declares, when she says in the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 307), "Truth has no beginning." While this divine rule is at all times ready for instant application, and while it declares only the truth of perfect God and perfect man, the use of it in meeting human needs requires of mortals what to them may seem like struggle or sacrifice. Actually, the rule of Truth applies numbers has always existed, and only to what is spiritually real. But that, although humanity waited for the rule of Truth acts as a law of as mortals cling to it, and utilize it, destruction to what seems real to false mortal sense. Nevertheless, the law of Truth is always beneficent, sustaining all that is real, and destroying only what is unreal and seemingly capable of discord.

Mortals who desire health and abundance and harmony must surely learn to look for these ideals in Spirit or divine Mind. They must learn how to surrender the false sense that any good is to be found in materiality, which is always apart from God. Citizens Getting Interested

"We cannot feel that it is altogether without importance that the people of Chicago should become interested in American history," writes the editor of the Chicago Tribune. One may echo the sentiment and express the hope that the area affected may include far more than the city of Chicago, for apparently what the editor has in mind is a discussion of the subject matter of American history. No longer content with the fact that school children study the history of their country several times between the ages of 8 and 18, the interested citizen may be led to ask what is included in this study.

Various answers have already been given in Chicago and elsewhere, These have been based, for the most part, upon examination, hasty or otherwise, of the texts used in the schools. Perhaps that is a safer test than dependence on statements of school program or outlines of study as reported by those who have par-ticular ends to serve. Examination of texts by qualified persons might yield important results, for texts are

RESULTS THURSDAY oston 9, New York 8 (10 innings), illadelphia 9, Brooklyn 5, Louis 13, Pittsburgh 10, icago 13, Cincinnati 0. GAMES TODAY New York's margin in the lead of the National League race was reduced to one-half a game, Thursday, when the Giants lost to Boston, 9 to 8. and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Pittsburgh league champions, 13 to 10. Chicago's victory over Cincinnati, 13 to 0, put the Cubs up from a tie for fourth place to undisputed possession of third. Brooklyn, which had possession of second place, after Wednesday's games, dropped to a tle for fourth by a loss to Philadelphia, Thursday, 9 to 5. Heavy hitting pre-Thursday, to so, heavy inting pre-dominated in the league Thursday, with Blake of Chicago being the only pitcher to hold off the batters well. The Giants looked as though they were off on another victorious ram-in the first six innings against the Braves, gaining an 8 to 3 lead. The heavy-hitting quartet composed of Hornsby, Brown, Bell and Farrell started hitting at this opportune moment and four runs were scored in the seventh inning by Boston with the aid of a home run by Farrell. Another run scored in the ninth tied the score and Boston had the punch to win in and Boston had the punch to with the tenth on singles by Hornsby, Bell and Farrell. Bell made four hits, including a double, and Hornsby and Farrell each had three.

Paul and Lloyd compiled only a single between them, Thursday, and as a result the Cardinals pounded out 13 runs to win by a margin of three runs. The Cardinals hit safely 17 times, Douthit, Holm, Bottomley and times. Douthit, Holm. Bottomley and Hafey hitting safely three times aplece. Pittsburgh was not far behind in the batting, with Traynor leading the attack with a double and four singles, the only player in the leagues who has made five hits in a game this season. Grantham helped with a home run and a double. The champions broke all records for the season to date by inserting 21 men into the game, most of the extras being pinch hitters. Another season's mark was established when seven men were used in the box by the losers.

At Chicago, the Cubs combined some achievements so surpassed the others

At Chicago, the Cubs combined some brilliant pitching by Blake and some extraordinary hitting to defeat Cincinnati overwhelmingly 13 to 0. Purdy and Ford with singles prevented Blake from obtaining a no-hit no-run game. Wilson celebrated his return to the Chicago lineup by making four hits, two of them home runs and one a double. One of his homers came with the bases full. Blake hit safely four times himself and so did J. Kelly, who also hit a home run. Every player in the Cubs' lineup hit safely at least once.

Although Herman and Bissonette, the star hitters of Brooklyn, contributed a home run, three doubles and a single between them to their club's offensive, Philadelphia was also in hitting form and pounded out a 9-to-6 victory. Pitcher Elliott and Parts 1 record of last year stood as far as the other runners were concerned, for Henigan, the second man, came in a minute behind De Mar's last-season mark.

Mullan was former Middle Atlantic Amateur Athletic Association cross-country champion. Leo O. Giard, of Brockton, Mass., an unknown in the race captured eighth place, the last of the large prize positions.

The team prize went to the Meadowbrook Club of Philaedlphia, with Mullan in fourth place, Wilson in seventh and Joseph M. Harvey in twenty-second place. The Quaker Cityhad a total of 33 points to 34 for the Dorchester Club.

A feature of this race and one which shows how much faster the race was run yesterday than last year is the number of runners who finished under the property of the original property of the property of the Oregon freshman team last season and won all games which they pitched. This pair teamed with Baker and with the veteran fielders behind them should go far this spring. Baker, a right-hander, has a fast, breaking curve with control and speed. He has had two years' experience. Fuller, a left hander, has a slow curve ball with a lot of control for a left-

Coach Reinhart plans on playing both Macdonald and Baker in all games. When one is not nitchin all games. When one is not pitchhe will probably go into the out-several veterans may find it difficult trying to retain their positions. Three catchers will give Woodie a hard run. C. L. Gabriel 30 looks to be the outstanding catcher of the four. He is stockily built, has a good throwing arm, but is lacking in experience. T. L. Reynolds 28, veteran basketball player, and D. E. Speer 30 both look promising. Reynolds, because of his reach and height, may be shifted to a trial at first base, Coach Reinhart intimated. Before coming to Oregon Reynolds was regular catcher one sea-son at Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash.

CATTLE PRICES OFF BUT LAMBS AND HOGS RISE

Live-Stock Receipts at Chicago Increase-Porkers at Season's High .

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR CHICAGO, April 20-Live-stock re-ceipts at Chicago increased approxi-mately in the case of cattle 5000, calves comparable figures of the previous week.

In spite of the added numbers, prices worked higher for both hogs and lambs, but in the case of cattle, a downturn of from 50 to 75 cents was noted on big weight fed steers, while other classes held mostly steady.

The improved condition of the provision trade in pork products was mainly responsible for $1 to $1.25 advance on live hogs of the better grade varieties. Fat lambs worked unevenly higher in which the in-between grades advanced most of the 15 to 35 cents upturn.

Long fed steers of weighty propor tions arrived in numbers too great for trade requirements, causing the marked decline on the kinds in question, although this is not true of the better grades of yearlings and long yearlings as well as light yearlings, all of which sustained their and in instances gained slightly, ac-cording to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department

A sudden demand for light offer-ings carried prices for long yearlings to $14.60, while the best heavies scaling over 1400 pounds stopped at $14.65. Light yearling heifers found depend-able outlet throughout the period peared to be within the $12 to $14 mark. At the close, the butcher stock market was distinctly in a situation where low-grade cows selling below $8.50 were in active demand, while better grade kinds above the indicated figure appeared to be slow and inac-

The highest hog prices of the season were accomplished on this week's market, in which the top on 180 to 210 pounds choice kinds reached $10.15, as compared with a $9 market a week ago, and an $8.15 top at the season's low time. The scarcity factor has had the effect of narrowing the price spread on the better grade hogs, generally speaking, from 160 to 350 pounds, at a price scale from $9.50 to $10.10. Packing sows were also included in the upturn of 75 cents to $1, accounting for the bulk of sales from $8.40 to $8.75.

The element of quality appeared to be the deciding factor in the general advance of 15 to 35 cents for the bulk of the fat lambs, A relative percentage of wool skins in point of numbers is on a decline accompanied by interior quality.

Except for grassy kinds the clipped lamb quality remains satisfactory. A light supply of sheep accounted for a 25-cent rise, while a marked scarcity of feeding and shearing lambs held since early May, 1927, top clipped lands reached $16.

3 to 4 Times More Wear

Science has discovered a new way of knitting. Just at the point of hard-est wear a special wear-resisting thread is woven at the tip and over the top of the toe. This revolutionthe top of the toe. This revolutionary feature covers one small inch of space. Yet it is hidden to the eye. The foot iself cannot feel it. A losiery achievement known to the world as Ex Toe. And by it wear is multiplied by three or four.

Odds and Ends

"Peeps'" Dlary

Pepys' Diary, an account written in shorthand, or "tachygraphy," of the events in the years 1660 to 1669, remained in manuscript until it was deciphered between the years 1819 and 1822, and a part of it was published by Lord Braybrook in 1825.

The Encyclopædia Britannica says the name was pronounced in the seventeenth century—and has always been pronounced by the family-"Peeps."

Detroit News: They haven't invented any quick-drying lacquer yet that dries so instantaneously that an active two-year-old child can't get some on her pink dress.

If Candid in Small Things-

THE oncoming presidential campaign may be a stirring one after all. What a spirited and really worth-while contest it would be if a few of the issues which are actually agitating the people of the whole Nation should somehow get out into the open and be clarified by forthright statements of purpose by the party conventions and honest statements of conviction by the party candidates. It is not that the party leaders are always unable to meet issues squarely. They have done so already, and as evidence in point consider the unequivocal positions taken by the national chairmen of the Republican and Democratic Parties with respect to the Get-Out-the-Vote program of the National Civic Federation.

The plan, as outlined to the leaders of the two major parties, contemplates a campaign of education in 500 cities to stimulate the electorate to an appreciation of the importance of taking an intelligent interest in governmental affairs, and of registering their judgment at the polls. The party leaders have given their hearty approval to this program; they have commended its purpose and assured its sponsors that they will earnestly lend their support for its success. A fine beginning has been made. The parties have accepted one of their responsibilities with a candid and clear-cut statement of policy. They favor more and better voting. A second responsibility rests no less definitely with the party leaders. If they are sincere in their desire that the election should command a representative vote of the Nation, issues which dominate public interest must be lifted from the limbo of political vagary and specifically undertaken. If the party leaders can be candid and clear-cut in the small things, they can be expected to be so in the greater.

Toward a Balkan Locarno

THE "pact of nonaggression and arbitration" recently concluded between Greece and Rumania may be interpreted as a step toward the establishment of better relations among all the Balkan states.

Of course, the pact in itself is not a matter of the greatest significance, for Greece and Rumania have long been on good terms and are sosituated geographically that it would not be easy for them to go to war with each other Besides, they have many common interests and are not divided by rivalry nor by any disputes of a vital nature. Therefore, it was not very difficult for them to conclude such a pact.

For that very reason it was a wise act. It was a first step. And after the first step the second step is easier. The act has already had excellent results. It has been very well received, not only in Athens and Bucharest and Belgrade, but also in Sofia. . The press of Bulgaria has shown a very favorable attitude. Within the last few weeks, indeed, some of the leading Sofia dailies have shown themselves unusually friendly toward Rumania. Besides, both in Bulgaria and Greece the matter of refugee property, which has long been pending between the two states. has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion. So the way is being cleared for the establishment of better relations between Greece and Bulgaria, as well as between Rumania and Bulgaria. Perhaps two more pacts may be signed before very long. In this way the Balkan peoples may move toward their Locarno.

At present the most serious difficulty in the way of such a development is the question of Macedonia. The violent acts of the Macedonian revolutionists on one side, and the drastic Serbian régime in Macedonia on the other, keep relations between the only two Slav states in the Balkans strained. Still, even this difficulty must eventually be surmounted, and Rumania and Greece are to be congratulated on having taken a decisive step toward Balkan peace and good

The Primary Vindicated

DECENT results achieved in primary elections n in some of the states of the American Union have been sufficient to supply a convincing answer to the popular query as to the effectiveness of that somewhat modern method of applying democratic theories to actual practice. There has been noticeable, in some sections of the country in recent years, an apparent tendency to regard the political primary as little if any better, as a means of selecting acceptable candidates for public office, than the older and somewhat discredited caucus or convention system. And it must be admitted that this feeling of dissatisfaction was not without some justification. Unwise selections have been made in many instances, with the result that incompetents have found their way into office, sometimes in legislative assemblies, sometimes in executive positions, and sometimes on the bench.

But the fact remains that mistakes equally as deplorable were as frequently made before the adoption of the primary method. Under that system the voters were powerless, after delegating their authority, to express any choice as to the personnel of their party tickets. Their only recourse was to refuse to vote for undesirable candidates or to cast their ballots for the nominees of the opposing political party. The latter is not an easy thing to do, generally speaking. The voter who prides himself upon his regularity is not easily persuaded to "scratch" his ticket. His freedom of choice, therefore, is best assured where he is at liberty to express his preference directly in the selection of candidates in the pri-

Perhaps it is a fair conclusion that wherever there has seemed to be a failure of or weakness in the primary plan it has been because of negligence or inaction on the part of the voters as a mass. Incompetency has been charged, it may be, where the greater fault was indifference. Taking the recent result in Illinois as an example, it cannot be doubted that the voters, when aroused and interested, are able to assert their own convictions and preferences so emphatically that their meaning cannot be misunderstood.

But the realization of this fact is gratifying, or the reverse, as one admits the tendency, so apparent in the past, to regard lightly a really important privilege of citizenship. The temptation is to demand the assurance that the lesson has been learned. If it has not, the mistakes and misadventures of the past will be repeated. There is no royal road to perfection in government unless it be that by way of the ballot box. The primary has vindicated itself as an institution. The burden of proof is still upon the American people to show that it is a safe and sound instrumentality in their hands.

Reorganizing British Industries

THERE can be little doubt that changes of great extent and importance will take place in British industry during the next two or three years. The projects for co-operative control of output and price regulation in the coal industry, the proposals for large-scale amalgamation of mills in the American section of the Lancashire cotton spinning trade, the important merger of coal interests through the Powell Duffryn concern in South Wales, and the discussions now proceeding in the basic industries on the necessity for modernization of plant, all indicate a steady evolution of outlook and a weakening of the intensely individualist tradition which has so far governed the conduct of the old-established manufacturing concerns.

It is not only in the basic industries, however, that the signs of great change are clear. In the miscellaneous trades, where spectacular reorganization can hardly be looked for, methods are being carefully examined, particularly in relation to possibilities of eliminating waste both in manufacturing methods and in distribution. Increasing interest is now being shown in the remarkable results of the simplified practice movement instituted in the United States by Herbert Hoover.

The necessity for standardization and simplification was, indeed, recognized in Great Britain long ago, and the pioneer organization in this field, the British Engineering Standards Association, was formed over thirty years ago. Although it has done valuable work in establishing standard specifications for engineering products, however, its activity has been greatly limited in the past.

Now a much wider movement, in which this association will take an important part, has been initiated by the Board of Trade, acting obviously under the stimulus of Mr. Hoover's success. Following a conference, a committee has been set up, with a representative of the Board of Trade as chairman, to undertake the task of organizing a campaign for the simplification of types of all manufactured goods which lend themselves to this process. The Federation of British Industries, the Association of Chambers of Commerce, the Engineering Standards Association, and bodies representing iron and steel, motor, and electrical equipment manufacturers, are to be actively associated with this committee. Its influence, therefore, will be very great throughout British industry, and when its work gets well under way it cannot be doubted that notable results will follow.

A Passing Necessity

ACCORDING to the Department of Commerce, the total of foreign capital securities publicly offered by American underwriters during the first quarter of 1928 amounted to $409,390,000. While this total represents a notable gain over the quantity of such securities floated in the United States during the same quarter last year, the increase was represented by the gain in refinancing. Deducting the refinancing, the net value of new foreign securities offered would show a reduction of $54,000,000, compared with the same quarter last year. At least one-fourth of the foreign securities being floated today, therefore, represents refinancing of issues already held by investors in the United States.

From this it may not be concluded that the foreign lending on the part of the United States has met with any notable diminution. It represents rather that Europe, notably, is finding her own capital needs at home and is growing less dependent upon American investors. The analysis of the securities offered during the first quarter represents that this is a fact. There was noted a marked decline of new issues from continental Europe, despite the fact that two French issues were floated. The figures show, however, a marked increase in issues from Scandinavian countries. Coupled with these were issues from Poland and from Greece.

The records of investment houses indicate that the prospect for new foreign issues within the immediate future are not so large. Some $500,000,000 would probably represent the total of such issues under negotiation, and it will probably be quite a while before the financiers are ready to float any considerable part of them. There has been a marked decline in the necessity for borrowing, which is the only adequate explanation for this change in the statistics. Under such conditions, therefore, the borrowers are finding an excellent opportunity for refunding such loans as they already have out in the market. With interest rates declining, such refunding operations are greatly encouraged.

The ability of the United States to lend has not been abridged in the least, as will be attested by all financial authorities. The present tendency in loans is but a natural development in the money market. Furthermore, with a continuation of the movement to export gold by the United States in the general scheme to redistribute the world's reserves, commercial credits are likely to continue at a pressing rate. That situation would normally mitigate against any extensive foreign borrowing until normal credits have been restored. Foreign borrowers are today experiencing a much less urge through necessity than in years past, and their borrowings, it is reasonable to expect, will be induced by closer figuring and most careful calculations in the future. And that very condition will greatly enhance the public confidence in the issues already out.

Reducing the Mexican Army

TATHEN President Calles was directing the affairs of the Mexican War Department in 1920, the army had a strength of close to 100,000 men. Recently the Chief Executive of Mexico stated at Vera Cruz that the plan for a reduction of the army which he had considered seven years ago would soon begin so as to make the infantry and cavalry consist of no more than 35,000 or 40,000. The present strength of these two divisions is 68,000, exclusive of officers.

As Minister of War, Calles had, in fact, begun reducing the various military units, but periodical exigencies following-such as the de la Huerta revolution, the Yaqui campaign and other untoward causes-necessitated calling a halt to the plan. That internal order has been restored in Mexico, and that without this President Calles could not now proceed with his plan for reducing the army, would seem to be the logical conclusion to be drawn from the move

Economic experts familiar with Mexican finances and budget plans state that with the army program becoming effective it will be possible to add one school-teacher to the Mexican educational system for every seven soldiers discharged. No doubt President Calles has given consideration to the great savings to the Nation that would come with a reduced army. And it is not at all impossible that such savings might be placed to the credit of Mexican education. More schools in Mexico would be a benefit farreaching in its effect.

After May 1, according to President Calles, the places of those wishing to leave the army will not be filled. With regard to the national air force, however, instead of being included in the reduction scheme, it will receive an additional impulse, due to what President Calles considers a national necessity.

Homing Golf Balls

OLFERS have come a step nearer the ulti-Tmate. The unlosable golf ball has been patented. No matter where it is driven-on the fairway, in the rough or into the innermost depths of the most hazardous hazard-it will come, figuratively speaking, romping back like a tousled collie who has just had a dip in the surf. The formula of the inventor is comparatively simple. By application of the process, golf balls that have strayed from their owners may be found by asserting themselves to the sight, smell or hearing.

Fancy hearing a lost golf ball calling to its master! But that is precisely what this inventor contemplates. The ball is covered or immersed in a pyrotechnic solution similar to the material from which "spit-devils"—used by small boys on the Fourth of July-are made. When the ball is struck it fulminates and continues to crackle and sputter for some minutes, or perhaps moments, thereby enabling the golfer to find it. If that device is unsatisfactory, or annoys the owner who objects to hearing little golf balls calling for him, he may immerse the ball, before teeing off, in a solution of phosphorus and carbon bisulphide. As the solvent evaporates the phosphorus will emit a perceptible glow, even in daylight. If the golfer wants to play at night, so be it.

But the most æsthetic appeal of the unlosable golf ball is through the sense of smell. The bal! is coated with some of the essential oils, such as attar of roses-expensive? yes, but what matters that to the ardent golfer?-and thereby gives off a pleasing and pervading aroma.

Imagine two golfers meeting in the rough searching for balls that have strayed beyond their ken.

"Ah," one may say, sniffing politely, "here The other may raise his head, also sniffing politely, then adding: "Sorry and thanks, old chap, but that's not mine. I'm using black narcissus. That's obviously violet." Then after a moment or two, meeting other searchers, one of the golfers may say: "I say, old chap, if you're using violet this season you'll find the ball over by the hedge."

Editorial Notes

A note in the Port Angeles (Wash.) News deserves more than passing notice, and the suggestion contained therein might well be followed in many communities. It reads as follows.

Ladies: Have you any flower seed left over? Then take it out to Lake Sutherland, Lake Crescent or other places and plant it along the roadside. Go out several times and see that it is watered. Then you will have the pure joy later on of seeing the roadside bloom. Better think that over.

In contrast to the prevailing tendency of picking every wild flower, and destroying many plants, such a plan, if carried out, would do much in the way of improving the highways.

In a headline, a Newark (N. J.) paper asks 'How much does public care about clean politics?" In answer the Detroit News remarks. 'No one can say. But it would be interesting to try them once, and see." Might not the same question and answer be used in connection with clean journalism?

Water power produced 37 per cent of the electricity in the United States last year and saved 27,000,000 tons of coal. Power plants using coal also greatly increased their production per ton of fuel. Herein are two vital reasons for the lessening demand for the product of the mines.

Dog teams had to carry messages from the German transatlantic plane at Greenly Island to the radio; something like a farm horse pulling a limousine out of a mud hole.

On the Indus

swells with the melting of the snows of the Himalayan mountains in the summer heat until it is able to boat for nine or ten miles from shore to shore. It is unpleasant even to think of the old days when officers and men of the frontier garrisons could only get back to civilization after many hours in the intensest heat in boats that zigzagged to and fro to find channels deep enough to take them.

In local parlance, the sun on the water is like a slap from a stepmother, and to the temperature of the atmosphere is added the steam of the river. But now there are light railways from the border to bridges or easy crossings, and the old strenuous times are gone.

It is in the winter that the Indus is delightful. It settles down into a bed a mile or so wide with many a branching creek, both large and small. The summer floods make many changes to the land when it emerges. Where last year there was water, there may be sand, sand may have changed to mud, mud to clay, and clay to loam, easily broken up and fit for excellent crops.

On the other hand the arable land may have been cut away and melted in the stream. As the ground varies, so does the growth on it. Mud will grow tamarisk shoots, which may never do more than provide fodder for geese. More clay will increase the tamarisks into a thick belt of brushwood, much enjoyed by the gay black partridge. + + +

In the loam will grow wheat and pulse, and round the crops, on sand slightly covered with clay, thickets of reeds and dwarf poplars will provide cover for buffaloes as well as for pigs and the gentle hog deer.

A most delightful amusement is to journey down the Indus toward the end of February and the beginning of March. The climate is perfect, the bitter cold of the Punjab winter nights has gone, and the days are comfortably warm, and people have not begun to think of the superheated times ahead. The blue sky is unflecked, except on rare occasions, with the slightest sign of a fleeting cloud. A great barge of the type that Alexander used many centuries ago for his return journey out of India can be turned into a suitable houseboat by the construction on it of two huts made of tamarisk poles, reed ceiling and sides plastered well over with mud.

Downstream one goes, now drifting with the current when the course of the deep water goes straight ahead, now plashing with the great oars pulled by pairs of rowers so as to follow the vagaries of the channel. Sometimes the boat is passing under a high bank of which the sides are ever crashing into the water as the banks are

The wood of dwarf poplars changes into a thicket of reeds and again into a wheat field, on the young shoots of which a flock of bar-headed geese are guzzling. Graceful little terns wheel and scream at the edge of a crumbling

In the rear of the fields, the thickets and the stunted forests, the ragged hills of the frontier form a continuous fringe to the scenery. Barren, gaunt and treeless they stand up on the west like the hills that fringe the littoral of the Red Sea. The absence of a reasonable amount of rain prevents the growth of anything but scrub, and vet the sides are seamed and fissured with the extraordinary storms which come at rare intervals.

Every twenty years or so the whole annual rainfall comes down in a deluge for four or five hours. Rugged as they are, they serve as a set-off to the absence of scenery on the east, where the desert stretches away for miles. The boat swings away into a maze of mud flats and

THE Indus is a mighty, restless, capricious river that | sand banks, and it is interesting to join the ancient steersman who commands the vessel on the high poop, and to watch him with the aid of a long-poled rudder find his way by the deep stream which meanders among the

> For a heavily laden boat to ground is a sad affair which forces all the men overboard to heave and strain against the side of the vessel, or causes them to pole furiously as they run up and down the boards outside the hold. From the poop or, better still, a position on the roof, the river can be studied, for it is where the multiplicity of creeks and mud flats bring security from the intrusion of outsiders that the birds prefer to congregate.

> Duck of many varieties desert the ponds and lakes where they feed in the hours that man is away from the surrounding fields, and swing up and down stream or congregate on the dry land at the edge of the water. Here and there a smew in black and white with his russet colored spouse will be diving for fish in the deep stream, but the others, even the diving ducks like the pochards, have come for rest.

> Geese, gray, bar-headed and white fronted, also come for repose and some with a sentinel on guard go fast to leep on the sun-warmed sand. As midday approaches, the gray and demoiselle cranes who for the better digestion of the pods of peas and pulse on which they have been guzzling since dawn have been wheeling in spirals high in the heavens, descend to take their noonday drink and then stalk majestically about the sand bank. If it is of the ooze, ready at the slightest approach of danger to vanish suddenly. Perhaps with eyes and knobby nose only showing, he may cruise around like a submarine. Very rarely there may be a glimpse of a porpoise rolling over, and when the banks of fields are reached again, an otter may be seen prowling about the broken hummocks.

Of men there is little sign. Occasionally one may be working a Persian wheel on the bank to give more water to his crop, or be cutting out green herbs for the evening pottage. A party of fisherfolk will drag a shallow creek with a long net and pull out carp and catash, mahseer full of jagged bones, and occasionally smaller fish and crayfish most excellent to eat.

Otherwise the river may be empty except when some unfortunate folk have to tow their boat upstream or fortunate ones with a strong south wind behind them come threshing along at a fine pace with the breeze filling out their one enormous sail.

opening of the Milan Fair, which will be represen-tative this year of all that is best in the field of leading firms specializing in artistic products suited to the furnishing and decoration of the home will be exhibiting artistic furniture, wrought iron ware, ceramics, Venetian glass, damasks and brocades for hanging and upholstery, stamped and embossed leather work, marble and alabaster statuary and ornaments, laces, bronzes, and many other products of Italian art industries.

Another important group of exhibitors of artistic goods has been organized by the National Institute for Small Industries, and on its side the Federation of Artisans is bringing together the most notable specimens of the beautiful work of the important and highly skilled group of producers it represents. The National Export Institute has sent invitations to about 1000 leading American importers of artistic products, 30 Canadian, 20 Argentinian and Brazilian, 20 Australian and South African, and to some 70 British firms, besides many Spanish, French, Czechoslovakian, Hungarian and other importers. The fair will be open from April 12 to June 19, and during this period visitors will also have the opportunity of visiting the great exhibition to be held at Turin, where the latest products of the Italian silk industry will be on view, as well as special exhibits of applied chemistry and agriculture.

The German film, "Metropolis," which was on show recently at one of the leading picture theaters of the capital, was withdrawn by order of the Board of Film Censors. Its suppression caused great surprise, especially as the film had previously been submitted to the Board of Film Censors, which approved its exhibition on the ground that it contained nothing that might corrupt the morals of the young people or that might cause political unrest. Apparently, however, some overzealous Fascists "Metropolis" several scenes which, in their views, were harmful to Fascist ideas. It was recalled, for instance, that the scenes showing the wholesale sabotage of machinery on the part of the workers and the rising of the masses against the rule of the capitalists might remind Italian workers of similar episodes of class warfare which occurred in Italy shortly after the war. The Board of Film Censors accordingly ordered the immediate withdrawal of this film on purely political grounds. 4 4 4

A serious effort is again being made to revive the Italian film industry, and several newspapers are offering large sums of money as prizes for the best Italian film to be produced in the course of the year. The Government, on their part, have done all that was in their power to proteet the Italian film industry, and the decree providing that at least one out of every ten films shown in the principal cinemas should be of Italian production is now receiving full application. It is admitted, however, that Italy is unable to regain the desirable position which she held in this field before the war. All the best cinema artists and stars are now abroad, and the competition of foreign, and notably American, film companies is too great to be overcome. In spite of the fact that the few films produced in this country, with Italian artists and Italian capital, are artistically perfect, they fail to attract the interest of the Italian public and have never a long run. The United States holds here, as elsewhere, the market, but Germany is daily gaining ground and is becoming an embarrassing competitor. English and French films are practically unknown in Italy. + + +

The whole area between the Palatine and the Aventine Hills once occupied by the largest race course of ancient Rome-the Circus Maximus-will shortly be cleared, and the framework of the Roman monument will reappear in

The Circus Maximus, the last vestiges of which were destroyed in the time of Pope Paul V, was originally instituted by Tarquinius Priscus in honor of Consus and beautified by many Roman emperors. We find several descriptions of it in many Latin books, and although certainly the upper tiers have been destroyed during the invasions of Rome, it is hoped to recover many interesting remains, and especially some of the magnificent marbles which once adorned it. The circus was capable of seating more than 250,000 persons, and the last race which took place within its walls was in the year 549 The two obelisks now at the Piazza del Popolo and Piazza del Laterano stood in this circus. Remains of its old walls are still visible, and the site is now occupied by a few factories.

In the universities of Milan, Padua, Siena, Modena and Sassari two new kinds of annual scholarships have been instituted to enable very needy students to prosecute their studies. Scholarships of the first kind are equal in value to the total amount of fees and contributions payable, and may be granted to students who have obtained ninetenths of the possible marks in their previous year's examination, and not less than eight-tenths in any subject. In the second kind the scholarships are of half the value of the first, and may be granted to those students who have obtained not less than eight-tenths of the total marks in each subject of their examination. At the University of Padua such scholarships may be granted also to students of foreign nationality. Before a scholarship is granted, careful inquiries are made into the financial conditions of the student's parents.

Traffic returns now published show increases in both passengers and freight, and also in the number of airplanes and hydroplanes used. #### A Literature of Good Will TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

It would be an interesting study to make a collection of the literature of good will. In the past there have been collections which showed how one nation could heap abuse on others. It would be more profitable to demonstrate that literature may serve to promote international understanding. The other day while reading Gustav Frennsen's "Peter Moor's Journey to the Southwest," I came across the following passage. A first lieutenant of the German Navy is represented as speaking, and he has this to say:

We seamen think otherwise about the English than do the landmen. We meet them in all the harbors of the earth, and we know that they are most worthy of respect. Behind those high chalk cliffs dwell the first people of the earth, distinguished, wise in the ways of the world, brave, united and rich. But we? Only one of these qualities do we have from of old—bravery. Another we are gaining slowly—wealth. Shall we ever have the others? That is for us the living question.

It should be mentioned that this was written in 1906, and the history of the world would have been different had national feeling been molded by men like Frennsen, who cultivate the literature of good will and understanding. HERMANN STYLES FICKE.
